(Case presentation, 100 marks)

Female lady, suffered from left sided headache, visual affection 3 month ago. Her symptoms were intermittent. A neurologist asked for CT brain and then referred her to a neurosurgeon, who asked for further investigations. Recently, in the last 3 weeks, she has developed sudden severe headache in her left side also more than previously described. On examination, she is fully conscious with some loss of concentration, no motor weakness. But her gait is markedly unsteady with tendency to fall down if not supported.
